Wednesday, no
Tuesday.

Dear Harold,

It's not often I write two letters to one person on the same day. But it so happens that an hour ago I mailed you one letter, and just now I received your letter with the maps.

The extra ten percent on your check was due to a pleasant mistake on my part in which I told Bob Rogers he promised you $250. for the story. I showed him your letter, and we had a good laugh over it. Glad it helped.

About the maps: with these alone, there doesn't seem to be a story. As I recall, you said some legation was getting you further data. Between you and me, though, with the war getting so complicated, I think we're better off talking about other things. I'll hold on to it anyway.

Don't forget those ideas.....

Best regards,

Don
